A Message from the President

Greetings!

I hope everyone enjoyed the summer and you are off to a productive academic year.

The FHSLA 2015 Conference Planning Committee has been hard at work planning the meeting that will take place April 9-10, 2015 in Ft. Lauderdale. This year's theme will be "Delivering Information That Matters."

The Continuing Education Committee has been using feedback from last year's meeting to explore meaningful CE opportunities. Our partners in the South Florida Health Library Consortium have been instrumental in scouting locations for both the venue and the lodging. We will be excited to announce the final plans as soon as they are finalized. In the meantime, if you have any ideas for social events or activities that you'd like to see in your 2015 meeting, please don't hesitate to send them in.

If you have any questions or more suggestions, please contact me at dshereff@usf.edu. If you haven't done so already, join FHSLA on LinkedIn.

Thank you for your continuing support of FHSLA!

60 Minutes: Library Edition

What do you do when you are invited to come up with a great idea for a one-hour workshop to promote your library and be ready to present it in two weeks? Brainstorm – right! Serials and Instruction Librarian Jenny Alleyne, Circulation Supervisor Sylvia Dominguez, AV & Archives Librarian Becky Fisher, and Reference & Cataloging Librarian Mary Rickelman did just that. Every August, Adventist University hosts an intensive week of preparation for faculty and staff called “Pulse Week.” This is a time to grow personally, professionally and spiritually. From our brainstorming, we decided to create a video parody of 60 Minutes: “60 Minutes: Library Edition.”

Please click here to see the video.

How fortunate we are that ADU has a new staffer dedicated to creating video projects! Brandon Baker, Media Tech Specialist, did an excellent job putting together a very real “60 Minutes” opening and quick interviews of faculty and staff talking about how the ADU library had impacted them. At our presentation, we began with the video, and then we divided our attendees into two groups and played a game of tic-tac-know about the ADU Library. It was a fun way for us to inform our group about our many resources and services. Our presentation finished with an Andy Rooney look-alike, our previous Library Director Marley Soper. He expertly wrapped up our presentation with well-chosen quotes and examples of the general value of libraries and specifically the ADU Library. We made our case in a fun and entertaining way in just 60 minutes.

Health Professions Division Library Wins Innovation Award

The Health Professions Division (HPD) Library is the winner of the 2014 Springshare Innovation in Academic Libraries Award for its innovative pilot program of lending iOS applications to enhance student learning.

The Springshare Innovation in Academic Libraries Award recognizes a new program or service that demonstrates an innovative approach to academic librarianship. The announcement was made by the Academic Division of the Special Libraries Association on June 10, 2014.

Building on the success of HPD's iPad initiative and HPD Library's popular iPad lending program, three of NSU's seven HPD colleges (College of Osteopathic Medicine, College of Optometry, and College of Pharmacy) now require incoming students to have iPads. In response to a student's request to "borrow" one of the apps preloaded on the 28 circulating library iPads for use on her own iPad, HPD Library researched and developed a method of circulating paid iOS apps for download onto users' iPads and iPhones. In collaboration with Apple, program-specific apps were purchased in various quantities. Circulation began in August, 2013.

The program showed immediate success with more than 300 loans in seven months and 98 renewals. Now one year into the program, those numbers have increased to over 357 loans and 272 renewals. Unexpected results included the fact that students from all seven HPD colleges participated, not just from the four colleges requiring iPads. Additional copies were needed of the most popular apps to meet the demand. Future development may include the use of mobile device management software to circulate apps to remote users as well. Faculty members are now recommending the apps on syllabi, effectively integrating them into the curriculum.

The Academic Division of the Special Libraries Association believed this project showed responsiveness from the HPD Library to its environment. Since many students were required to have iPads for their studies, the HPD Library team realized a prime opportunity in lending new resources in an innovative, student-centered manner to support academic excellence.

HPD Library team members presented 2 poster sessions about the iOS circulating program at the Medical Library Association's annual conference in May, 2014, and at the Southeast Florida Library Information Network's annual conference in July, 2014. The poster and its abstract can be viewed on the program's LibGuide. HPD librarians will also publish an article about the project in a trade, peer-reviewed journal in Spring, 2015.

The HPD Library is located on the first floor of the Terry Building Complex, 3200 South University Drive, Davie, Florida. The 19,000 square-foot library was opened in 1996. The library serves Health Professions Division students and faculty on the main campus as well as distance learners and students at the regional campuses.

The HPD Library is open seven days a week, except on holidays. It has access to more than 140 health professions databases, 741 electronic books, 814 books in print including 26,609 volumes, and 10,237 electronic medical journals. The library also features 48 private study rooms, a small teaching lab available for small group instruction, collaboration areas, and a recording studio, among other features.

QUOTES ABOUT THE PROJECT:

"The verbal feedback we're getting from students is very positive. Many have expressed that they are thrilled to have such a program at their library and find the apps extremely useful as study aids. One student commented that studying with one of the anatomy apps 'saved' her from failing an exam - a great testament to providing circulating apps as visual, interactive, mobile resources to support academic excellence." – Amanda Chiplock, Emerging Technologies Librarian, HPD Library

"We take pride in developing innovative ways to increase and enhance the information technology resources available to our patrons." –Desman Ford, Technology Support Engineer, HPD Library

"For a kinesthetic learner like me, I appreciate the hands-on information that circulating apps provide. Apps are certainly a quicker way to assimilate information rather than searching through textbooks. I attest that my grade improved after using one of the apps." - Jenna, COM-1st yr. (on using Visible Body)

"The 3-D manipulation really helped me understand how the different subcortical structures work together. By discovering their close proximity to one another, I was able to make the connection." - Freddy, COM-1st yr. (on using Pocket Brain)

Leasing iPads

This August the University of Central Florida College of Medicine welcomed 120 new medical students, all of whom were deployed an iPad by the health sciences library. This year, however, the library team worked with the College of Medicine and Apple to implement a new leasing program. Student equipment fees are being collected to lease iPad minis for each student, which will then be turned in after the first two years of medical school. At that time, the students will be given a new device, depending on which Apple tablet is on the market at that time. At the end of their four-year medical school career, students will be given the option to return their tablet, or to purchase it outright for a nominal fee. The library team hopes the leasing program will allow the library to refresh students' technology after two years, the average amount of time during which new tablets are released.

Library Director Nadine Dexter meets with new medical students receiving their leased iPads during the UCF COM orientation fair on August 5, 2014.

Library Liaison Program

Starting in August five health sciences library faculty will be acting as liaisons for the fourteen modules of the College of Medicine curriculum. Each module has been assigned a primary and secondary liaison, who will work with the module directors to better integrate library resources and services into each module. The library team is looking forward to this exciting opportunity to increase usage of library e-resources, and to grow awareness of the library's LibGuides.

Appreciating Our Faculty: A Yearly Tradition

The fourth annual Faculty Appreciation Luncheon in front of the Harriet F. Ginsburg Health Sciences Library.

On August 22, 2014 the health sciences library held its fourth annual Faculty Appreciation Luncheon to thank the College of Medicine teaching faculty for their hard work and collaborative efforts with the library team. This year's lunch had a summer picnic theme, complete with flip flop cookies and a watermelon grill! Library Director Nadine Dexter gave a brief presentation updating attendees on all of the library's exciting new resources and services.

FHSLA Officer/Committee position(s): Treasurer

Current Position: Reference Librarian, Health Sciences Library, Orlando Health

Education (include all degrees): B.A. English Boston University; MLS, Concentration in Health Sciences Librarianship, University of Maryland, College Park

Favorite Website or Blog: For professional purposes, of course, the Krafty Librarian. For fun, I love the Twitter feed for @FakeLibraryStats

What made you decide to become a medical/health sciences librarian?

My first post-undergrad job was working on the editorial staff at a medical publishing company. I loved the material, but I got frustrated that so much important medical information came with such a hefty price tag. I thought medical information for profit was wrong (I was so young and idealistic!) and I wanted to help people have access to that information. Also, my dad was a middle school library media specialist for a time, so it was in the blood.

Why did you join FHSLA and is it the same reason you are a member today?

I initially joined FHSLA on the recommendation of my co-workers, who praised the networking and CE opportunities. Those are the reasons that I continue my membership – and I have always enjoyed and learned quite a bit at the annual meeting.

What has been your biggest professional challenge?

I worked for several years as a solo librarian and I was rather inexperienced at the time. Learning on the job, seeking out professional development opportunities, and improving processes on my own were quite a challenge.

Whom do you admire?

My grandfather. He was a physician in Latvia. When he immigrated to the United States, he taught himself medical English out of a dictionary and eventually became licensed to practice in the U.S.

Is there anything about you that others might be surprised to know?

I started my own non-profit animal rescue with some friends, I work part-time at Animal Kingdom washing dishes for the zoo animals, and I sing in a community choir.
